Bamboo, cork, recycled foam... learn more about the materials that support your practice at yogajournal.com/greengear.

Nalgene On-The-Fly Reusable Bottle
If you use plastic, this may be your best bet—it's made in the U.S. from Tritan, an estrogen-activity-free plastic. Reuse and then recycle it! ($13; nalgene.com)

EcoYoga Jute Mat
A unique combination of natural jute—a coarse plant fiber used in burlap—sourced from farms in India, natural rubber, and plant-based dyes makes a reliable, durable, and lovely mat to practice on. ($85; ecoyoga.co.uk)

Gaiam Sol Premium Yoga Strap
Nonslip bamboo material helps you find security in poses. ($12; gaiam.com)

Halfmoon Silk Eye Pillow
Relax with natural silk and a flax-seed filling. ($18; shophalfmoon.com)

Halfmoon Soul Surf Cushion
No toxic chemicals or dyes are used on the cotton cover, which is filled with otherwise-wasted buckwheat hulls. ($53; shophalfmoon.com)

Manduka Recycled Wool Blanket
A soft blend of recycled wool and synthetic fibers from old sweaters and more ($32; manduka.com)

Bean Products Organic Rectangular Yoga Bolster
Oeko-Tex-certified dyes guarantee that this organic cotton cover remains free of formaldehyde and pesticides. ($55; beanproducts.com)

Prana Large Headband
